Collaborative Statement

Advance care planning is a process that allows for the exploration of life care needs over time, involving a progression of conversations with people close to us about what is important in our lives.

The LifeCare Conversations project puts advance care planning into action and requires multi-level support from many individuals and groups across Cape Cod. As leaders who represent many of these groups, we state our commitment to form collaborative relationships that will foster successful outcomes for this important project.

As members of the Conversations Collaborative, we believe that decision-making about medical treatment will improve if all adults are:

- better informed about the realities and possibilities of medical interventions;
- assisted in making choices about future treatment should they become unable to communicate for themselves;
- assisted in communicating their values, feelings, beliefs and choices to those who care most about them, including health professionals who provide their care.
